He was at once rushed to the St. James hospital in Chicago Heights where he died the same night at 10:05 o'clock without regaining consciousness.

The matter of licensing dram shops since the return of liquor was taken up with attorney H. Howard Schluntz at the meeting of the Mokena village board Tuesday night. It was the opinion of the attorney that inasmuch as the Illinois state legislature had not made any provisions for liquor control, the village could not legally require or issue a license for selling liquor and that any one wishing to sell liquor within the village could do so without any local license until such time as the state passes laws regarding liquor control in municipalities.

WOLF ROAD RIGHT OF WAY CONDEMNATION SUIT TO BE TRIED NEXT WEDNESDAY IN CO. COURT

The first real skirmish in the condemnation suit for a right of way for Wolf road thru the timberland on the C. M. Cleveland farm for the paving of Wolf road to connect with the Lincoln highway south of Mokena, took place Monday morning of this week before Judge Wynn Knoch of DuPage county in the county court of Will County Monday morning of this week.

Attorney A. H. Krusemark representing the county in addressing the court pointed out why the Wolf road right of way was routed thru the Cleveland farm and further showed that the Wolf road paving is to be carried on south from the Lincoln highway to route 51. He also showed that Mokena is the only village in the county not connected with a trunk line paved road, due to the delays and stalling of the past three years in efforts to bring the condemnation suit to trial. He asked the court to set the case for immediate trial.

Attorney Wm. D. Heise, representing C. M. Cleveland, put up the same old plea about the proposed route destroying a beauty spot and further stated the routing of the highway thru Mr. Cleveland's timber tract was a piece of spite work.

Both attorneys got into a lively tilt for a moment. Judge Knoch after hearing the preliminary statements set next Monday morning as the time for filing of objections in the case and set next Wednesday as the date when arguments for and against the right of way in question will be heard and the case will be on. Judge Knoch set January 3rd, 1932 as the tentative date on which the jury is to make known the award for damages they feel Mr. Cleveland is entitled too.

States attorney Wm. R. McCabe was present at the preliminary hearing Monday morning, but took no part in the proceedings.

THE FIRST GOOD SNOW

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHEN you find the first white hair,
Sort of takes you by surprise.
You have had your usual care,
Clouds that came to summer skies,
But the clouds have drifted on
And the sun has shone again—
Though the spring has passed and gone,
Never thought of winter then.

But some morning in the fall,
Yes, some day before you know,
You will find the meadows all
Covered with the first good snow.
It's a warning and a sign
That the winter isn't far,
And you fill the shed with pine,
Knowing what our winters are.

When you find the first white hair
It is time to think of things,
Wrap your heart in warmer wear,
In the faith that comfort brings.
Draw up closer to the fire,
To the loved and loving near,
Think of things the old require,
For the first good snow is here.

CAKE WISDOM

FROM the lowly gingerbread to the luscious melting sweetness of the Lady Baltimore, there are cakes and still more cakes. There are cakes for every occasion, birthday, Christmas, wedding and christening cakes.

With cake for dessert there is an infinite variety from which to choose. A square of gingerbread with whipped cream flavored with a bit of chopped preserved ginger and sweetened with its sirup—there is nothing equal to it, if you like ginger.

Chocolate cakes seem to hold the preference, they may be rich and luscious, full of soft rich fillings of fruit and nuts, or plain, covered with a fudge frosting, any kind, if chocolate, is welcome.

Ribbon cake, an old-fashioned favorite, is another pretty cake with its light and dark layers and fruity filling.

Cup cakes filled with various fillings are always popular. Scoop out the center, leaving a shell thick enough to hold a chocolate nut filling or sweetened and flavored whipped cream and topped with a maraschino cherry. Chocolate cup cakes filled with a mocha or a caramel filling are especially tasty.

GRAPHIC GOLF

PUTTING SUGGESTIONS

IN TAKING the putting stance the player should make sure that he is not standing too close to the ball. Oftentimes golfers are stooped so far over that they are looking back at their feet instead of outward at the ball, their body tensed and not relaxed. With the eye looking forward one is better able to keep the hands on the inside of the line of play and also gain the proper path to the hole. The clubface is closed and the arc of the stroke kept low to enable a sweeping, stroke. With this long, low arc the tendency to hit the ball on the upstroke is minimized. Although hardly noticeable, there is the same weight transference here as in other shots. This enables the left hand to travel further to the left, insuring a longer, flatter arc.

act measurements and careful mixing, comes the baking. The oven should be slow for fruit cakes and those with molasses and brown sugar. Divide the time the cake should bake into quarters. The first quarter it should begin to rise; the second, finish rising and begin to brown; the third, finish browning and began to shrink from the pan; the last quarter, test with a toothpick to be sure the cake is baked to the center.

Cool on a rack to avoid a moist and pasty bottom when the cake is cut. If no rack is at hand use anything to keep the bottom of the pan free from the table.

Too much flavoring is like too much perfume—in poor taste. It is better to blend a few drops of vanilla, lemon and almond or two of any desired flavoring extracts.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

REDDY COMES BACK WITH A BRIGHT IDEA

IN VAIN Reddy Fox sat on the bank of the Smiling Pool waiting for Jerry Muskrat to reappear. After awhile it became clear to Reddy that Jerry didn't intend to return. He got up and stretched. Then he yawned. He looked down in the Smiling Pool and his face was anything but pleasant. In fact there was an ugly look on Reddy's face.

"Now what did he have to think of that mud for?" growled Reddy to himself. "Everything was going fine until he thought of that mud. He was so interested in the plans for that here, and that we can't do."

Reddy grinned. "Listen," said he. "What is mud?"

"Why—why—why I suppose it is earth and water," stammered Jerry.

"Exactly," replied Reddy. "Certainly. Of course. To be sure. Now don't you see how we can get all the mud we need?"

Jerry scratched one ear. Then he scratched the other ear.

"No-o-o," he replied slowly. "No-o-o, I can't say that I do."

"We'll wait until it rains!" cried Reddy triumphantly. "We'll wait until it rains and then we will get all the mud we need from the pile of earth I have thrown out in digging my underground house. Wasn't it clever of me to think of that. Now we won't have to give up the house after all and you will help me build it just as we planned. We'll make it the most wonderful house that ever was!"

For a minute or two Jerry Muskrat brightened up. Then he remembered that what Reddy probably had thrown out was mostly sand, and sand does not make real mud.

"You'll have to think again, Reddy Fox," said he, and told him why. So once more Reddy went away disappointed.

Lesson for December 10

PAUL IN CESAREA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 24:10-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men. Acts 24:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Returned Missionary.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Prisoner Before a King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Have a Good Conscience. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Way of Life.

I. Paul Tarrying in Philip's House (Acts 21:3-14). He was bound for Jerusalem. On his journey thither he took up his abode with Philip who had so successfully wrought as an evangelist in the early days of the church. While entertained in this home, Agabus, by symbolic act using Paul's girdle, portrayed the binding of Paul at Jerusalem. The meaning of the words of the disciples at Tyre is to be understood in the light of the Spirit's revelation through Agabus. To the Tyrian disciples the Spirit made known the fact that suffering awaited Paul. To Agabus the Spirit made known what kind of suffering. The same Spirit made known to Paul what awaited him at Jerusalem and sent him forward into it.

II. Paul before Felix (Acts 24:1-27). 1. Paul arrested in Jerusalem (Acts 21:38-40). Paul, at the advice of the elders of the church of Jerusalem, took a Jewish vow in order to conciliate the Jews. Even if it did conciliate the Jewish brethren, it greatly enraged the unbelieving Jews, inciting them to mob Paul. On the basis of supposition these maddened Jews dragged him from the temple and beat him unmercifully, intending to put him to death.

2. Paul accused (Acts 24:1-9). Paul is now in the hands of Felix who determined to hear his case after his accusers had come from Jerusalem. The case against him was formally presented by Tertullus, a Roman lawyer. The charge contained four counts:

(a) A pestilent fellow (v. 5). This would indicate a fellow utterly base and corrupt—a plague.

(b) An inciter of rebellion (v. 5). This they hoped would bring him into conflict with the Roman power.

(c) The ringleader of a sect (5). The aim in this charge was to throw contempt and suspicion upon the Christians, thereby bringing Paul into deeper trouble.

(d) Profanity of the temple (v. 6). In this charge they wilfully suppressed facts.

3. Paul defends himself (vv. 10-21). This defense is a superb example of the strength and dignity of a man whose life is actuated by a noble purpose. Observe:

(a) Paul's frankness and courtesy (v. 10). He freely recognized the fact that Felix had been ruler long enough to be able to form a just judgment, and assumed that Felix would render a decision on the basis of facts.

(b) Charge of sedition denied (vv. 11, 12). He showed the utter falsity of the charge on the ground of the shortness of time, and also on the ground of his conduct while in the temple, even challenging proof of their accusation.

(c) Charge of heresy (vv. 14-16). This he met by a concession and a denial. He admitted that he was of this "way" which they called heresy, but denied that Christians were heretics. He showed that his actions were in keeping with the Hebrew religion, worshipping the same God, believing in the same Scriptures and had the same hope of a coming resurrection of the dead.

4. Felix trembles before Paul (vv. 22-27). Wicked as was Felix, Paul's manner won his favor though it did not secure the apostle's release.

III. Paul before Agrippa (Acts 25:26).

The occasion of his appearing before Agrippa was the visit of Agrippa and Bernice to Festus. More than two years had elapsed since the trial before Felix. During this time the Jewish hatred for him had not abated. Upon the arrival of these guests they expressed a desire to hear Paul. Before these distinguished personages Paul boldly witnessed. The gospel should be preached to all, regardless of wealth or station in life. As a result of Paul's defense Agrippa was almost persuaded.

Ideals

As we advance into life, out of larger experience of the world and of ourselves, are unfolded the ideals of what will be possible to us if we make the best use of the world and of ourselves taken as we are.

Greatest of Mistakes

The greatest mistake which Christians have ever made is in thinking that charity is the beginning and the middle and the end of all religion. It is the end, as peace is the end of war. It is not the beginning.

More Necessary

When we want to make anything a success in worldly affairs we put our whole heart into it. And is this not much more necessary in the service of an holy God? Is he not worthy?

"I felt as if that's what I'd be doing if I married him. I knew George was in earnest, and I couldn't convince Howard."

Rocky nodded. "I understand. It's just as you say to someone who wants to leave your house in a rainstorm, 'I don't want to give you pneumonia. Was that it?'"

"Oh yes. I'm afraid I'll never be able to make anyone understand about that note."

"I'll call up the hospital and get them to put George Mortimer under arrest."

The wedding rehearsal was finished, but most of the party were still gathered around the bishop discussing it.

Rocky followed Doris over the long green path that led to the house. They came to the small side porch that belonged to Beatrice, and entered it through a screened door.

In the small sitting room inside it, Rocky rang up the hospital. He got the doctor immediately.

Rocky scowled. His distressed eyes were on Doris. "He's gone."

"Gone?"

"Yes. Doctor's a bit upset." He put the receiver in its holder. "Had a broken shoulder bone, you know, and a fever. They told him to stay in bed." He drew down the ends of his mouth, stared at Doris with lowered head. "If he gets away there may be trouble for you."

She was bewildered. "You mean—they won't take my word for it?"

"I don't know. We must get in touch with the police. Where was he going?"

"Toward Canada, I think. He came down here to find me. He saw the story about the arrest in the papers."

Rocky tapped nervously on the telephone desk. "Of course he's crazy."

She looked frightened. "If I marry you—you won't be safe. He'll come at you sometime out of some bushes." Her features worked convulsively. "You see, I did kill Howard. I ought never to have married him!"

"Nonsense. That's morbid. He won't get me."

Doris went to the door and looked out on the gay screen porch. Her eyes were blank. "That's the way Howard talked."

Rocky rose, and put his arm about her. "But darling, the police are sure to get him."

Her voice was dry, constricted. "Until they do—he mustn't find out about us. I tell you he's not normal. He'll do something awful to you."

Rocky kissed her averted head. "Don't you worry. The police will have an easy time. He won't know the alarm is out for him. And with his arm in a sling—"

He let go of her, and turned back toward the telephone. "He'll be stopped at the border."

He sat down and put his hand on the receiver, but did not take it up. "Now the great thing is to get in touch with the right people. If I simply call for the police, they'll have the news all over the world in no time—George Mortimer will be warned—and then he may never be caught. The big thing to avoid is publicity—and that ought not to be hard if—"

He did not finish his sentence because three newspaper reporters walked into the room. They had come to write up the St. Gardens wedding, but they knew a good story when they saw it.

There was a dead moment in which Doris looked at the girl reporter expressionlessly. The two men reporters stood still, staring. One was a young blond boy in baggy gray clothes. The other was shorter and older with very large ears, and hair that needed cutting.

The girl reporter spoke first:

"My G—d!"

The blond young man rubbed his chin with a grimy hand.

"You're drunk!" he said. "Or am I drunk?"

The man with the big ears spoke with a slow New England drawl. "Do you see what I see?"

The girl reporter smiled her nicest smile, showing white teeth and crinkly blue eyes. "And I thought I was covering a society wedding!"

Rocky left the telephone stand and went to Doris as if to protect her. She was no longer afraid. She knew who she was now. Besides, she liked the girl reporter's looks. She smiled at her now, courageously. "Yes. I'm Diane Merrell."

The girl reporter sighed happily—a prayer of repletion—as if she had just eaten the best dinner of her life. "I just can't believe it."

The man with the big ears drawled, "It looks like our big chance."

The blond boy clapped his hands on the shoulders of his two colleagues. "Big chance! You said it! Fame, glitter. Boy—here's where you leave the stix! We'll get her away before the other guys wise up. There's a mean guy here for the A.P. and he'll have this in every paper in the country before we can get through on long distance if we aren't careful!"

He pushed the other man away and moved toward the phone. "Let me get to that telephone."

Rocky held Doris in a vise. He was beyond speech. He was the frightened one. Her face was pale and drawn but she held it high as she said, "I didn't shoot Howard Valery."

The reporters paid no attention to her statement. They were too dizzy with joy at finding her to think of anything else but getting the credit for their discovery before the glory of it was snatched by a faster thinker.

While they argued Rocky quietly took possession of the telephone. "Look here—" he tried to intervene in the talk. It was useless. Beside the dazzling possibility of an exclusive story their situation was as nothing.

Rocky held a firm grip on the telephone. "Is there any way of making friends with you people? Aren't you human at all? If you want a story I should think you'd listen to it. We've got one that will knock your eye out—maybe you can help us decide what to do."

Before anyone could answer, the telephone's ring pealed through the tiny room. Rocky answered.

"Are we human?" shouted the boy, Charley. "Of course we are. Aren't we offering—"

"Hello," said Rocky into the tele-

"Yes. I'm Diane Merrell."

phone. Suddenly he smiled at Doris. "It's Reno. Yes—"

The rest of his words were lost in the hullabaloo made by the reporters.

Rocky hung up the phone. "It's all right. It's all over," he said to Doris.

A door opened on the screened porch.

"What's that?"

"It's the wind."

Rocky, holding his place by the telephone, interrupted with some firmness. "Before anything else happens, this lady and I are going to be married."

"Oh, Rocky."

"Yes. There is a bishop just coming in from the garden. Can't you hear his firm tread on the stairs?"

"Have you got a license?"

"No—but—"

"I'll get it for you," said Charley.

"How's that for friendship? Now let me get New York on the phone. All I'll say is that Diane Merrell is on her way to give herself up to the police, and will reach New York late this afternoon."

"That won't give us time to get married."

This time every one heard the step on the porch. A man sprang from behind a huge chair—a dark shape looming in the doorway.

The face of the man in the cab showed above a white bandaged arm.

Doris screamed.

"You're going to marry him—after everything?"

His eyes gleamed strangely. His left hand held a small revolver. "I knew you'd come back here. I knew you were crazy about that man."

The two men reporters stood like statues. The girl sagged against the portiere and clung there. Rocky half rose from the telephone bench. Doris stared into the muzzle of the wavering pistol.

"I've been looking for you for six weeks. I went to Detroit after the girl that was found out there—calling herself Diane Merrell. I saw the two girls they picked up in New York. Then just as I'd given up hope—" his voice was thick like that of a drunken man—its overtones were heavy with self-pity. "I made a mistake—a big mistake when I shot Howard Valery. I should have shot myself instead—myself and you."

Doris turned terrified eyes on Rocky for one short moment. She could feel his tenseness even across the room, and she knew he was going to lunge in front of her. Rocky would be killed. That would be the second man dead on her account. Strangely enough she felt no fear for her own safety. She wanted George to shoot her. If only he wouldn't get Rocky.

George Mortimer laughed—the shrill high note of insanity.

"You first—then me!"

Rocky threw himself. He seized the shaking wrist and pointed it upward as the gun went off. George Mortimer fell straight back without bending.

Rocky spoke out of the side of his mouth. "Here's your real scoop. He's the murderer of Howard Valery."

Charley had recovered some of his poise. "So we gathered from his general conversation. What shall we do with him? He's a looney—and dangerous."

Doris had opened the clothes closet where Beatrice had locked Molly. "That's a good idea."

It took all three men to lift him and put him in the closet.

When Beatrice St. Gardens' wedding was over, Rockwell St. Gardens was drinking a quiet glass of wine in the seclusion of the rose arbor with his good friends Oscar and Adoree Du Val. Beatrice had ridden safely away with the governor's son. Most of the guests had gone, though the bishop was still there, quietly resting after his day's work.

"It was so beautiful," sighed Mrs. Du Val sentimentally. "Never have I seen a wedding go so smoothly—and well. Really it was like a play."

Oscar Du Val lifted his glass and watched the fading light change and deepen the color of his wine. "My only regret was that Doris and Rocky weren't here."

"Ah yes," said their host. "It was too bad. She seems a very nice girl, but I hardly saw her when she was here. She is in bad health, poor girl, isn't she?"

Mrs. Du Val leaned her fat elbows on the table and looked meaningfully at St. Gardens. "Yes—she is—that is true she has not been well." Her cooling voice rejoiced and mourned alternately. "It is a sickness we do not mind seeing a young bride having—n'est-ce pas?"

St. Gardens lifted an eyebrow. "I did not know. Congratulations."

Mrs. Du Val beamed happily. "Come, Oscar. It is now we drink the health of your grandson that is coming!"

As the three lifted their glasses to drink, a strange young man bounced through the gate. His blond hair was wild, and his gray suit needed pressing, but his blue eyes were dancing with excitement. "Mrs. Du Val! This is Mrs. Du Val, isn't it?"

The good lady rose, her eyes widening with alarm. "Something has happened to Rocky! Tell me. I can bear it."

"Nothing. He's getting married. And he wants you to come quick!"

St. Gardens rose. Oscar Du Val ran his hands excitedly through his white hair. "But no—"

"It is not possible."

"He is married to Doris!"

"Oh that's all right. He divorced Doris today. He's marrying Diane Merrell. Get it—"

In his exuberance Charley went so far as to give Mrs. Du Val's well-cushioned ribs a poke. "Diane Merrell. The Diane Merrell!"

Mrs. Du Val gave a low scream.

Oscar Du Val caught her in his arms. "Divorced Doris!" she moaned. "Why did I ever give birth to such a boy!"

"We will soon stop this," said Oscar Du Val.

"Yes—yes. Perhaps it is not too late. Oh, that poor little Doris!"

St. Gardens followed the Du Vals into the house.

Meantime the bishop was being roused from his quiet meditations. Two insane people were pounding on his door. Rocky and his friend Mike.

Charley had got a marriage license which was now in Rocky's pocket, and there was a very important wedding to be performed downstairs, they told the good man. His "Mercy me!" his "Oh my goodness!" his "This is not quite in order," were as disregarded as if they had never been said. But when he saw the two that he was to marry he had nothing more to say; a holy man, it was his business to say, "Whom God hath joined together," so he knew from their faces that it was all right. He made no more inquiries. He prepared to do his duty.

But before he could begin Rocky's parents came in, followed by St. Gardens. Mrs. Du Val was so relieved to see Doris that she burst into tears.

"They told me you were divorced—but now I see it was only a cruel joke."

"No, it wasn't a joke. Rocky and I are getting married. And we want you to—"

There was no time for many more explanations then. The Du Vals watched their son being married in a kind of stony amazement.

Doris had given herself up to the police, but she had been released, and George Mortimer was being held. So well had she been guarded by her three reporters that not a hint of what had happened disturbed the wedding.

Rocky and Doris got into their car.

Not half the story had been explained to their parents, but as Rocky said, it would take far too long to go into it all, and as Oscar Du Val never read the newspapers he would not even know who Diane Merrell was. Charley would explain after they were gone.

"Good-by, good-by." The gears slid into place and the car started down the long pine-fringed way toward the cement pavement.

"Diane Merrell," said Oscar Du Val to himself slowly.

Then, as his son had suggested, he went in the house and began to look at the newspapers.

The first thing that caught his eye was his own name—

DIVORCES SON OF OSCAR DU VAL

Offspring of Famous Sculptor Was Stingy, Doris Du Val Avers.

Settlement Made Out of Court.

Oscar Du Val settled himself to read. There was a good deal to explain to Adoree, and he might as well begin to find out what had happened.

[THE END.]

New Englanders Loath to Part With Antiques

In the houses of rural New England few antiques remain—for the reason that they have been broken beyond repair and replaced by stouter pieces, not because city dealers have profited by the dull wits of sons of the soil.

Nothing makes the New England farmer cling to what he has more than learning that some one else wants it. Especially to white shirts and suave voices he is determined to yield nothing.

I have known an old woman to cough away her last days in actual want, her only comfort the 10-cent boxes of ice cream a kindly country doctor brought her on his rounds, while a Boston attorney persistently offered her $100 for an applewood chair, $150 for a clavichord standing in her barn, $200 for a barrel of mirrors and pictures and candlesticks. "If they're worth that to him, they're worth it to me," said she, with unanswerable logic, and lived as she was until she died.—Gladys Hasty Carroll in the North American Review.

Revised Bookkeeping

"You say you have gotten your accounts out of the red?" "Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax, "and by a very simple process. I have the bookkeepers enter my liabilities in solemn black ink and my assets in joyous pink."

This Remarkable New Laundry Soap That Soaks Clothes Clean in 15 minutes

NEW LAUNDRY SOAP BREAKS ALL RECORDS FOR FAST WASHING AND WHITE CLOTHES

Soaks Out Dirt In 15 Minutes,

Yet Is Utterly Harmless to Color, Fabric and Hands

NO time-saving, labor-saving development of recent years has brought forth such a chorus of approval as Procter & Gamble's amazing new Laundry Soap Discovery! Everywhere, after trying it women are exclaiming—"Will the wonders of science never cease?"

For this remarkable invention is an utterly new-type laundry soap. A soap that multiplies itself 500 times in suds. Which means you get at least twice as much suds as from old-style soaps. A still faster-washing, still whiter-washing soap that's utterly SAFE for colors, fabrics, and hands.

This remarkable new discovery is called OXYDOL. And you'll find to your surprise that it makes other soaps—"granulated," bar or flake—hopelessly out-of-date.

Women believed they had the fastest soap already! Then found it was slow, alongside OXYDOL. For OXYDOL utterly banishes boiling. It ends washboard scrubbing. It cuts soaking time to 15 minutes—gets clothes out far sooner.

They believed they had the whitest washes they could possibly get. And are now amazed by washes 4 to 5 shades whiter than before.

By impartial scientific test, ONE washing with OXYDOL gets clothes whiter than 2 to 4 washes with other soaps. But that's not all!

You'll find clothes actually last longer, washed with this new soap. That the faintest colors DO NOT fade. That it is easier on hands than any soap you've ever used. For no strong agents, no chemical bleaches are in OXYDOL. Just pure soap elements so blended with others as to protect clothes against fading. OXYDOL simply can't hurt anything clear water won't!

DISSOLVES Dirt—In Any Water, Hard or Soft

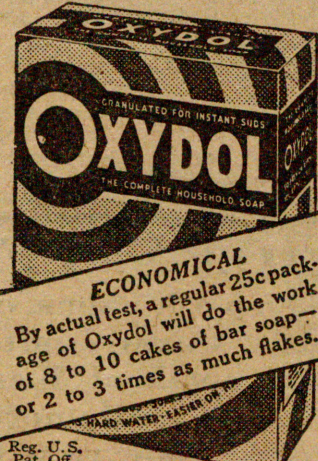

Its creamy, "free-acting" suds dissolve dirt out in 15 minutes. No boiling, no back-breaking scrubbing is necessary. Nor any "water-softener," either. For the right amount of water-softener is already there.

Different from ordinary soaps, OXYDOL is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it is sold. The water in this district, for example, has been tested for "hardness" by expert chemists. The OXYDOL you buy here contains just the right proportion of "softener" to fit it.

With OXYDOL you'll do your wash in 25% to 40% less time. You'll get a whiter, sweeter-smelling wash than ever before. Everything will iron beautifully—no soap streaks or smudges anywhere. And you'll never be bothered with fading colors or red, soap-bitten hands.

These things we promise you. Whatever your former favorite, try OXYDOL next time you wash. You'll never go back to slower soaps or harsher soaps again! Procter & Gamble.

PRESENTING NOTABLES OF WILL COUNTY

HENRY LAUTHERBACH

SUPERINTENDENT WILL COUNTY HOME, JOLIET

People forget that everything worth while has to be secured by conquest over the forces of nature and human nature. It is easy to point out defects in a machine that so many people are trying to run at the same time and each in his own way. The real efficiency of modern methods, however, is in those departments of public service run by experts, because no one but experts can do the work. That is why such departmental work runs smoothly. An instance may be cited in the case of Henry Lauterbach, who is Superintendent of the Will County Home at Joliet. During the time he has held this office he has admirably acquitted himself of the arduous duties of the post, in a manner that has enlisted the commendation of all concerned. He is one of those staunch individuals who have always zealously guarded the interests of the community and has never lost an opportunity to aid in its progress.

CHRIS THOMPSON

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF

Chris Thompson of Joliet urged by his many friends and acquaintances over the county has announced his candidacy for the nomination of Sheriff of Will County at the coming spring primary on the Republican ticket.

Chris Thompson, formerly of the Powers-Thompson Construction Co., has always been known as a worthy citizen of Will county and is well known known not only in Joliet, but in many other parts of the county and is held in esteem by his friends who are enthusiastic in their support of his candidacy.

Mr. Thompson, by his business experience and education as well as natural ability is admirably fitted for the office and people recognizing this have urged him to run. No matter what phase of the work, whether it is clerical, detective, or the carrying out of the orders of the court, he would be able to fill the office with dignity and efficiency.

Chris Thompson of Joliet is running on the platform of efficient and economical administration. The great deflation demands that we have men in office who are working to this end and no doubt Chris Thompson would serve the people well.

In this review, we are glad to compliment Mr. Thompson upon the reception his announcement has created over the county and would suggest that all take his candidacy into consideration when in the booth at the primary.

WILLIAM B. BARROWMAN

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF

What the country needs today more than the piling up of vast wealth, is more men in public office who place service to their fellow-men above personal gain. Some, perhaps are inclined to be cynical concerning the motives of men in public office as a result of the fact that many of them have taken advantage of the confidence the people have placed in them. Occasionally, however, there is found a man serving the public in office, whose character and public acts stamp him as above reproach. Such a man is William B. Barrowman of Joliet, who is a candidate on the Republican ticket for the office of sheriff, where he now serves as a deputy.

Mr. Barrowman is a former assistant Superintendent of the Pontiac Reformatory and deputy warden at the old prison. When public attention fastens upon such a man, the people cannot confer too many honors upon him as a token of the sincere regard in which he is held. Mr. Barrowman is indeed a striking example of the "good and faithful public servant." His conduct of the trust imposed in him has inspired an unusual degree of public confidence in him which we predict will eventually carry him to much higher office.

WM. R. McCABE

State's Attorney, Joliet

William R. McCabe who holds the office of State's Attorney of Will County must cope with all the best legal ability and sometimes be pitted against a battery of these legal lights.

There are some State's Attorneys who adopt the policy of convicting in all cases, regardless of extenuating circumstances, their desire for personal aggrandizement and political ambitions being too great to temper their views with the demands of real justice. Mr. McCabe has the viewpoint that his office is a public trust and not a machine to lift him to dizzy heights in the political arena, using unfortunate souls who have erred against society as mere puppets to serve as stepping stones for his personal advance.

Such men deserve political preferment all the more, though they do not ask it. Mr. McCabe is a man who indeed merits a place higher up in the realm of public service.

WILLIAM W. SMITH

WILL COUNTY RECORDER

Holding public office is a peculiar position. So often one may be perfectly sincere and honest and meet only with criticism. Then again one may use the office for ulterior motive and be considered a star in the political firmament. But today the people are becoming better educated to the possibilities of mal-administration and they are more careful and watchful than of yesteryears. Thus today, a man must be well near the mark of high standard to be able to attain a good public office. Then if he succumbs to temptation, that is something else again. A refreshing example, however, who has always lived along lines of doing service to his fellowmen and who has, by virtue of their respect, been placed in public office, is William W. Smith, Will County Recorder. He goes the even tenor of his way, is never spectacular and never makes extravagant claims. Regardless of partisanship he administers his duties in a manner that shows that kind of results that elicits the admiration of all concerned. It takes a man like Wm. W. Smith to do that and he well merits appreciation.

AUGUST MAUE

Supt. of Will County Schools

Closely identified with much that makes Will County so well thought of are its public officials. August Maue, Superintendent of Will County Schools is outstanding for his versatility. It has been his privilege to come into the world able to guide his own destinies and to make the most of those opportunities that come to every American citizen.

His success has been through his own efforts and that the people have always recognized his ability and character is clearly attested when they placed him in the responsible position he so ably holds and where he also shows a civic zeal that is admirable.

FRANCIS J. LOUGHRAN

Attorney at law

The history of our country from the beginning, shows that many of the keenest minds of every generation have been attracted to the legal profession. This is, perhaps, a natural condition, since in that field exists the greatest opportunity for the exercise of intelligence and talents the service of mankind. What ever may be the chief factor contributing to this condition, it is an established fact that in mentioning the names of a given number of people who are entitled to classification as the most useful citizens of the city of Joliet, the members of the legal fraternity loom large.

Among the members of the Joliet bar, who by their achievements are entitled to more than ordinary reckoning, is Attorney Francis J. Loughran, who is a candidate for State Central Committeeman of the Democratic Party. Broad of vision, keen, forceful and energetic, he has advanced to his present profession by the constant pursuit of those ideals which actuated the effort of the early lawyers of the province in founding the bar of the commonwealth. It is such useful men of affairs who are factors to be reckoned with in the advance of our community at large.

A number of Orland Park people attended the concert of the Joliet symphony orchestra held Sunday afternoon in the Joliet High School Auditorium at which Mrs. Prudence Neff Thomas, former Orland Park resident appeared as soloist. She made a great hit.

Hundreds of men are being employed in this section in CWA work. Large numbers of men have been engaged this week cleaning out ditches and repairing the earth shoulders along Wolf road from 143rd street south to the Will County line. The same kind of work is being done along the Southwest Highway from Orland Park to Chicago.

Fourteen men from Orland Park are employed on CWA work in the village. 200 feet of drain tile are being laid in the west side of town. Ground has been stripped for the construction of a tennis court in the forest preserve on 143rd to the west of Orland Park. Other projects are being planned.

Roscoe Scott advises that the editor was in error last week when an item appeared in this column last week to the effect that Mr. Scott was planning to leave for a trip to the West Indies. Mr. Scott says he had no intentions of making such a trip.

The Orland Park Fire Department held their monthly meeting at the village hall Monday night. Nineteen members were present.

The new license stickers for the 1934 vehicle tax have been received by the village clerk. A new design in the shape of a shield is being used for 1934.

The Royal Neighbor Juveniles held a social meeting Wednesday evening at the Legion Hall.

The village board will meet in semi-monthly session next Monday evening.

AFRICA

I started on a steamer from the United States intending to go to Africa to hunt gorillas. Our party landed at Rabat, a seaport in Morocco. We bought camels there and started across the Sahara Desert. We saw the Great Sphinx which was made of stone in the shape of a lion's body and a woman's. It was sixty-six feet in height and one hundred and seventy-five feet in length. Our party stopped at many oases where we saw a pyramid and an obelisk.

We sold our camel at Barguei where we hired natives to carry our supplies and dead gorillas. At the market place in Barguei all the people were talking and calling out the price of their wares. When we got into the jungle we had to cut our way through with an ax. One day as I was looking for water I saw a baby gorilla lying on the ground crying for its mother. As long as no mother came I decided to take it along for a pet and mascot. No sooner had I picked it up than I heard an excited jabbering in the trees above me. I looked up to see a horde of gorillas coming toward me. They would have killed me had not a great python reached from the tree and wrapped its body about the mother's neck. The other gorillas began to fight the snake. While they were fighting the snake, I slipped away unseen. We soon came to the Congo River and we rode down it on a boat. I travelled again by camel over the Kalihare Desert till we came to Cape Town. I again took passage on a steamer and when we got to the United States I sold my gorillas to a museum.

Dizzy Spells Gone

"To-day I started my 4th jar of Kruschen. First I must tell you I lost 30 lbs. in 3 months. I still wish to lose 25 or 30 lbs. I weighed 184 now I weigh 154. Do I feel good—boy I can say I feel better than I've felt in 10 years. Everything was wrong with me from headaches to backaches, my arms and hands would fall asleep at any time. They don't anymore. I used to have dizzy spells. Don't any more. Heartburn was so bad I couldn't eat or sleep. Don't have it any more." Mrs. Arthur Willette, Ferndale, Mich., Aug. 27, 1933.

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, HARMLESS way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know. For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drugstore—the cost for a jar that lasts 4 weeks is not more than 85 cents and if after the first jar you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back. When you take your little daily dose of Kruschen you'll be joyfully free from constipation—you'll gain that glorious Kruschen feeling—no more headaches, acidity or shortness of breath—no more nervousness or sleepless nights.

Donald: "Mother, it is cold—nearly half of my class was not there yesterday." Mother: "Cold weather does interfere with school, Donald, but I'm glad you can get there—thanks to our car." Donald: "But, mother, nearly all the other boys who were absent could come in cars but their folks don't even try to use them in cold weather—'cause they can't get them started." Mother: "Maybe, dear, they don't use the right gas and oil—that's practically the only difference between our car and many others. Understand, Donald, people are careless—they fail to get penetrative oil—found only in Germ Processed Motor Oil made by Conoco. Cold oil, even winter grade, unless it is right, makes it hard for the starter to revolve the motor. Conoco Oil helps motors turn over easily and then the Conoco Bronze Gasoline acts at the first spark and the motor starts at once."

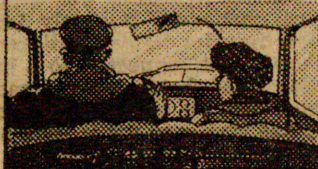

MOTHER DO YOU THINK THE CAR WILL START O.K.?

YES DEAR—IT ALWAYS DOES. WE USE CONOCO BRONZE GASOLINE AND GERM PROCESSED MOTOR OIL.

JIMMY SAYS HIS DAD HAS A TERRIBLE TIME EVERY COLD MORNING— I THINK I'LL TELL HIM ABOUT CONOCO.

GOOD BY DEAR I'LL CALL FOR YOU

Donald: "Mother, I should think the school board would make all parents use Conoco." Mother: "They couldn't do that, Donald, but it would be a good idea if the parents themselves would find out why their cars wouldn't start and buy Conoco. And I imagine they would if they knew it would save them money also."

CONOCO at the sign of the Red Triangle

Full motor protection, especially in cold motor starting, can be found only in Conoco Germ Processed (Paraffin Base) Motor Oil because the penetrative oiliness, called "The Hidden Quart" stays up in your motor and never drains away.

Instant Starting and Lightning Pick-up can best be obtained with Conoco Bronze Gasoline, and without sacrifice of Long Mileage, Greater Power and Anti-Knock advantages. For cold weather starting it cannot be excelled.

VETS TO SEEK NEW WELFARE LEGISLATION

Six legislative objectives which will be sought by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States when Congress convenes in January, were outlined today to members of William Martin Post No. 725, by Judge Advocate General Henry Marquard.

At the conclusion of Comrade Marquard's address, the members of Post No. 725, unanimously pledged their active support to the program, designed by V. F. W. leaders to remedy the evil effects of the Economy Act of March 20, 1933, and to aid in the immediate success of the National Recovery Act.

"The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States has formulated a six fold program as a foundation for all veterans welfare legislation.

First, we believe the care of the veteran is a federal responsibility to be paid for out of federal taxes. The bulk of these taxes is paid by those who enjoy large incomes and those who have profited most thru the year of America's prosperity. It is unfair and un-American in principle to place this burden of cost upon the local community and upon local charities, where the small tax-payer is already crushed beneath the burden of heavy taxation."

Adequate relief for veterans suffering from injury or disease incurred in actual war service is the second of the legislative aims of the V.F.W., while the third objective is relief for veterans suffering from disabilities due to injury, disease or old age who are no longer able to be self-supporting. The V. F. W. believes that the federal government has no moral right to regard the care of these veterans as a burden that should fall upon the local community.

Fourthly, we demand relief for widows and orphans of all veterans regardless of the cause of the veteran's death. These women and children are entitled to a chance to live and the matter of their welfare is a responsibility which belongs to the federal government.

In the fifth place, we do not believe that compensation, pensions or hospitalization should be withheld from any veteran or his dependents until they can prove they are paupers. Such a condition is unfair and un-American and tends to destroy self-respect.

Lastly, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States believe in the immediate cash payment of the adjusted service certificates, or bonus, not because it is a favor or special benefit for the veteran—not even because such payment was acknowledged a just debt should be settled now, not 12 or 15 years from now. We maintain that immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates would be a material and effective contribution to America's recovery from the worst economic depression of history. In order to assure this recovery, it is necessary that the purchasing power of the masses must be increased. Immediate payment of the bonus would distribute to three and one-half million veterans, representing between twelve and fifteen million individuals, cash amounting to two billion, five hundred million dollars. Such payment would affect the entire country immediately, for the money would quickly reach the channels of commerce and trade and would create jobs and stimulate industry and business in general.

First Steps Taken In AAA's Program On Corn and Hogs

First steps toward putting the government's corn-hog program into effect in Will County are now being taken with the building up of a mailing list of all corn and hog growers, it is announced by Farm Adviser Leonard W. Braham. This roundup of the names of corn and hog producers of the county will include all those who raise four or more litters a year and ten or more acres of corn a year.

This mailing list will be used in sending out notices of corn-hog adjustment meetings, details of the plan and other official matter, it was announced.

Arrangements have been made from Washington whereby rural mail carriers will co-operate in compiling the mailing list. They will leave each farmer an envelope in which he will return the information needed to complete the list. Directors in each school district, tax or assessor's books and elevator managers in each community also may be used in compiling the list, it was announced.

Final details of the corn-hog plan are now being worked out in Washington and are expected to be ready soon for announcement in this county, according to Farm Adviser Braham. Farmers will be asked to reduce their corn acreage 20 per cent from what it was in the base period. They also will be asked to reduce by 25 per cent the number of litters farrowed and the number of pigs marketed during the base period.

Every corn and hog grower in the county is eligible to participate in the plan. As payment for reducing corn acreage, co-operating farmers are to get 30 cents a bushel on the average production of the rented acreage as appraised and adjusted by the county corn-hog production control association. In return for adjusting hog marketings, cooperators are to receive $5 a head on 75 per cent of the average of such marketings during the base period.

The purpose of the plan is to adjust corn and hog production more nearly to the effective domestic and foreign demand and thereby help restore the purchasing power of corn and hog farmers. At the present time returns to corn and hog growers have sunk to low levels as a result of loss of foreign markets, a decline of 11 million in the number of horses and mules in the United States, reduced consumer income and other causes.

The AAA corn-hog program will involve a maximum of $350,000,000 in benefit payments, Illinois Counties, being in the second largest corn-hog producing state of the nation, will have a big stake in the plan, Farm Adviser Braham pointed out.

You do something to show your daring, such as picking loose hairs out of mustache or if you get "tight", you leave the party for awhile and come back with a red lantern. Ah, we played it when we were kids, remember? Without tuxedos it is called "stump the leader."

A sure cure for a socialist give him (you give him) a thousand dollar bill and tell him to divide it among his friends.

I wired Hollywood and told them to send for me, that I'd be the biggest thing there. They wired back and told me I was wrong. The biggest thing in Hollywood is Jimmie Durante's nose.

Never mind I'll get there. Even Mae West had to climb the ladder of fame "wrong by wrong."

A new Chicago Creamery is advertising for blond girls to work in the butter department. I suppose yellow hair in the butter isn't so conspicuous as black.

Is Carnera the champ? I saw a little fellow the other day grab him under the chin, stretch him out, and make him like it. I was looking thru the window of a barbershop.

With gold around $33 an ounce I notice a certain jewelry store "offering you this magnificent solid gold watch for only $3."

Furs have gone up in price lately too. But I suppose it costs the animals more to live than it used to.

Simplify Cooking, With Milk, Fruits, Corn and Potatoes

By WALTER W. McLAUGHLIN
Director, Illinois Department of Agriculture

THIS business of helping the farmers of your state is far from being a one-sided affair, for when you help them you help yourselves—your health, your appearance and your food budget. Also, you can make your housekeeping easier if you utilize these Illinois-grown foods. Milk and the three fruits—apples, grapes and peaches—are delicious in their natural form and require no cooking by the housewife; and potatoes and corn are among the most easily prepared vegetables, requiring little special care in cooking to safeguard their vitamins.

Breakfast in many households is a neglected meal. One reason for this is probably that less attention is paid to making it attractive and varied than is given to the other meals. Some variety in foods is desirable for it promotes appetite which is, of course, most important because no matter how nutritious the food you set before your family, it won't do them any good if it's so unattractive; and monotonously prepared that they won't eat it.

An easy way to provide that important variety is to substitute for the regular "orange juice, toast and coffee" breakfast, one made up of apples, grapes or peaches, toast or cereal and fresh milk. In this way you'll be patronizing the farmers of your own state instead of the orange growers of California and the coffee planters of South America, and you'll be gaining in food value and taste as well, for by substituting milk for coffee you will be truly exchanging something for nothing, as coffee has no nutritive value, whereas milk comes near to being a complete meal in itself with its abundance of protein, vitamins A and G, calcium and phosphorus.

If you put peaches on your breakfast menu you will be giving your family vitamins A and B and some iron (dried peaches are especially rich in iron); and if you exchange grapes or apples for oranges you will be getting some of that same vitamin C that is in oranges, plus some vitamin B and valuable minerals. (And you don't have to squeeze your Illinois fruits.)

Illinois Foods in the School Lunch.
Another place where the products of your own state will help make your housekeeping easier is in preparing the child's school lunch. Of course milk is the one essential that should not be omitted from that lunch, and Illinois' chief fruits—apples, peaches and grapes—are, conveniently, all of the easily carried type.

Enough about convenience in feeding the family. Now, how about the housewife's convenience in feeding herself? If you would like to reduce weight but hate to try following a reducing diet because of all the trouble in preparing special thinning dishes for yourself, this Illinois-products menu you are feeding your family will solve that problem, for fresh milk, fruits and vegetables are right at the top of the list of reducing foods, because they satisfy appetite without adding pounds. You will have to go lightly on the potatoes and corn. It is true, for they do have a high starch content, but the other foods—the milk, grapes, peaches and apples—should be standbys of your reducing diet.

Warm Milk Helpful in Relaxing the Active Child

By FRANCES BERKELEY FLOORE
Director of Dietetics, St. Luke's Hospital

WITH the radio, the movie and the Century of Progress vying for the school child's interest, the problem of seeing that he gets the proper amount of rest is perhaps more difficult than it was some years ago. But the modern child probably needs his rest even more than that child of yesterday, for with the increased excitement and activity of present day life, it is most important that he should have sleep to build up his strength. With the additional strain of school life, now being taken up again, sleep is even more important than in the summer.

Explaining why sleep is necessary a leading nutritional authority, Dr. Lydia J. Roberts, says: "A continual shortage of sleep, whether cut from the evening or morning end of the day's quota, may adversely affect the nutrition of the child in at least two ways. During sleep the body processes slow down and the need for energy is the least the body can ever require; awake and active, the needs are greatly increased. Thus every hour of awake activity stolen from the sleep quota, increases the fuel needed by the body. Unless more food is eaten to compensate, the body tissues are burned and loss of weight follows. But in addition loss of sleep results in a hyper-irritable nervous system, and nervous tension still further increases the food needs, while at the same time it usually diminishes the desire for food. Thus a lack of sleep tends to produce a nervous, irritable, undernourished child."

At six to seven years of age the child needs about 12 hours' sleep every night; the eight to ten-year-old needs eleven hours; the child of eleven or twelve should have ten or eleven hours; the adolescent of thirteen to fifteen years still needs from ten to twelve hours; and the sixteen to eighteen year olds should have nine or ten hours.

It is this last age group that is most apt to slight the hours of sleep—the athletes who have training rules to keep are probably the only ones who keep to such a schedule with any regularity. Perhaps if young girls realized the truth in the old saying about "beauty sleep" they would be more willing to go to bed earlier for it is true that lack of sleep quickly makes inroads on attractive personal appearance.

The problem of sleep for the young child is more easily controlled by the parents. A regular bedtime hour should be established; then make bedtime a pleasant period, rather than a punishment, making the half hour before retiring something to anticipate by having story telling or quiet games. It is a good idea to go into the room with the child to see that he is tucked in and comfortably settled; and of course see that the room is at comfortable temperature—about fifty degrees Fahrenheit if possible with plenty of fresh air—and as free from noise as possible. A glass of warm milk at bedtime is helpful in relaxing the child.

Not only sleep but a certain amount of rest and relaxation is essential. After school the child should not have to start on other lessons such as music, dancing or dramatic work. Nor should he have much home work to do. There should be at least two hours in his day which he can spend as he chooses.

Selfishly considered, parents should be vitally interested in seeing that their children have ample rest and sleep, for, as Doctor Roberts points out, a child suffering from sleeplessness is a nervous, troublesome one.

Indiana Girl Wins State Golf Title Four Times; City Champ Eight Years

Left: Miss Elizabeth Dunn snapped in characteristic pose on the fairway. Below: Miss Dunn at her position in the Lincoln telephone central office in Indianapolis.

Miss Elizabeth Dunn, night operator for the Indiana Bell Telephone Company at the Lincoln central office, Indianapolis, is queen of golf in Hoosierdom. She won both the Indianapolis and Indiana women's championships in 1933.

Hers is a remarkable record. She has held the Indianapolis title eight consecutive years, and has won the state title in 1926, 1927, 1931 and 1933.

The Highland Golf and Country Club, Indianapolis, sponsored her entry in the national championship tournament for women, which was held at the Exmoor Country Club just outside of Chicago starting August 28. Miss Dunn qualified; but had the bad luck to meet Virginia Van Wie, 1932-33 champion, early in the tournament and was defeated.

As every golf fan knows, a par or sub-par game requires constant practice. Naturally, the question arises as to when this young lady finds time to perfect those niblick and putter and driver shots. (One of Miss Dunn's feats in the recent state meet was the sinking of a thirty-foot putt.)

The answer is quite simple. Her working hours are from 10:00 P. M. until 7:00 A. M.; and during those wee small hours of the morning she handles the cords on her switchboard with the same grace and ease with which she swings clubs on the golf course. After her morning's sleep, she is ready for an afternoon battle with Old Man Par.

For thirteen years Miss Dunn has been employed in the traffic department of the Indiana Bell; one of the "voices with a smile" at the other end of the telephone line. The earnestness with which she has conquered many worthy opponents on the links is carried with her to her work. She is thoroughly in step with both vocation and hobby, which seems to make a pretty successful combination.

HOLD ON TO YOUTH

Begin Your Beauty Treatments From the Inside

By Marie H. Callahan, Editor
Modern Beauty Shop Magazine

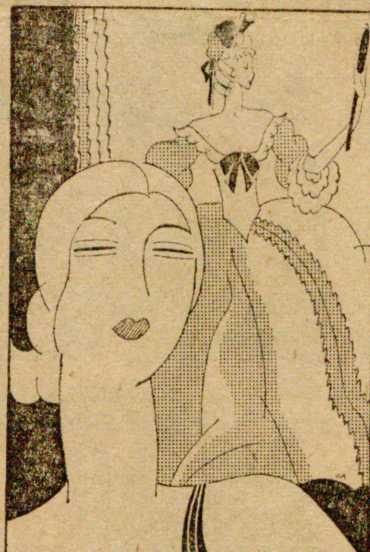

Along with the passing of the so-called "good old days" we have also cast off some of the old things that were not so good, such as sweeping skirts, hour sermons, horsehair furniture, the vogue for swooning, languishing women—and the idea that to be attractive a woman must have been endowed by Nature with a perfect, magazine-cover prettiness.

Today, fortunately, fainting women are no longer in fashion and it is stylish to be healthy. The modern conception of beauty as typified in the popular actresses of the day is that radiant, youthful quality that is the natural adjunct of good health.

Again it is fortunate that nowadays just about any of us can be attractive if we have good health, good sense—and a good hairdresser. If Nature has given us a bad deal—a nose or mouth that doesn't fit the rest of us or hair that is no particular color, or a figure that curves in the wrong places, we no longer just give up in despair and with a sigh of resignation join the ranks of the unbeautiful. No, by diet and exercise we reduce or develop that unattractive part of the figure; get a hat with a line that makes that long nose look distinguished, by an ingenious hairdresser glorify that hair of no particular shade, and by clever use of cosmetics we can even remodel the shapes of our faces.

But—the foundation of good health must come first. No hairdresser in the world can glorify straggly, dull hair, and facials and cosmetics can't do their best work on a skin blotchy from eating the wrong kinds of food. Begin your beauty treatments from the inside if you want to get the best results from your outside beauty care.

All of us know we must use creams on the outside of the skin to have that soft, smooth complexion we desire. Why not use fresh milk and cream on the inside, too? In fact, recent experiments have proved that one very desirable result of drinking several glasses of milk each day is that one quality in it—the calcium—is, besides being a complexion aid, a very large factor in preserving all the characteristics of youth. Further, milk contains vitamins necessary for building resistance against various infections including those of the skin.

And of course you don't need to be told that intestinal sluggishness is a big enemy of a clear complexion. If milk, cheese, buttermilk, leafy vegetables, clear soups, oranges and grapefruit compose most of the diet, you are quite sure not to be bothered with complexion troubles. For the complexion truly reflects the condition of the general health.

In the matter of selecting the creams to use on your face, of course there are almost as many different types of skins as there are people, so, without studying your own particular problem personally, even an expert cannot prescribe for you.

But in general—take your inside beauty treatments by building your daily diet around fresh milk, fruits and vegetables, and make cleanliness the basis of your outside treatments using cleansing creams or pure soap and water, depending on your particular skin.

First Chinese Subscriber's Name Still in San Francisco Directory

Elizabeth Lee, telephone operator in San Francisco's Chinatown central office, with photograph of Chan Quong, world's first Chinese telephone subscriber. At left is the 1878 San Francisco telephone directory, and at right the latest issue.

San Francisco's present telephone directory contains the name of the first Chinese telephone subscriber in the world. And the name, Quong Lee, remains in the book as it was originally listed 55 years ago.

Quong died in 1918, but his grandchildren, Yochow Chan and T. H. Wong, are now carrying on his business under the same name in the same location. Quong's full name was Chan Quong. He put his store down in the city's first telephone directory of 1878 as "Quong Lee," meaning "Quong, out for business."

In 1878 the telephone was only two years old, and wires were nailed in a sketchy sort of way to store and residence roofs in San Francisco for the world's third telephone exchange.

Chan Quong, who as a lad of 16 came to San Francisco in the gold rush days, immediately saw the value of being able, without leaving his store, to talk to social and business friends blocks and miles away.

He ordered a telephone, and little suspected that he would be famed as the first Chinese subscriber anywhere.

From that pioneer Chinese subscriber has grown Chinatown's present several thousand subscribers, served from one of the most noted central offices in the world.

But among the thousands of Chinese telephone users in Chinatown, in the United States, and in China, and elsewhere, Quong Lee was the "Daddy" of them all.

The Parent Teacher meeting of November 28 was well attended. The meeting was opened with the P. T. A. song. Miss Doig read an appropriate poem, "Thanksgiving." The P. T. A. is buying a new basketball for the school.

After the business session, our president, Mrs. Nebiker, turned the meeting over to the program chairman, Mrs. Coler. Everyone joined in singing, "Service" to the tune of "Moonlight and Roses". Miss Doig played the piano. Mrs. Coler read several verses from the little book, "Good Cheer."

The speaker of the evening was Attorney C. B. Elder, one of our own Mokena people. He gave a very interesting talk on Parents and Teachers and their work. After another song the meeting was adjourned and everyone enjoyed a social hour and a nice lunch, prepared and served by some of the ladies.

Now folks, please keep the night of December 15th open as the P. T. A. is giving a card and bunco party on that date. The proceeds will go toward buying the candy for the children's Christmas party.

"The Children Had to be Warned"

"The blizzard struck late in the afternoon, and by early morning travel was almost impossible. The county superintendent of schools, realizing the probable danger if rural schools opened, ordered his teachers to close them. Immediately the teachers began telephoning their pupils, warning them to stay at home. Thus many a child was prevented from making a dangerous and unnecessary trip, because his folks had a farm telephone."

MAKE-UP WEARS WELL

WE HAD a complete series of lessons in the home facial. And—since no treatment, whether at home or in a salon is complete without the finishing touches—we will start today a series of lessons in make-up.

First, let us dispel several wrong conceptions—the better to understand the why and wherefore of make-up and its proper application. Happily, the groundless superstition that make-up is a wicked art is fast fading away. Partly because natural make-up is the vogue, we are striving for that rosy, healthy quality of color that is natural—not the bold, artificial, too-obviously rouged look. There's another reason why the old-fashioned notion (that make-up is bad), is losing favor. Both men and women prefer it. They have seen it make a magical and delightful change in wan, depressed, listless looking faces.

Perhaps the reason make-up was once considered wrong is the fact that in the past too many women applied it too badly. Wrong colors were used—dead white powder for instance. Faces looked clownish. Vivid rouge—and only one or two shades. Now there are as many rouge shades as there are skin tones. There's still another reason for the uncomplimentary reputation make-up once won. And that is: too many young girls and women rely on powder and rouge to cover up blemishes instead of giving the body and the skin the necessary care to keep the blemishes away and to preserve a smooth, clear, fine and healthy skin.

In other words, make-up in itself cannot give you a beautiful complexion if you haven't a flawless skin to start with. But make-up can make doubly beautiful the skin that is systematically cared for, properly cleansed, toned and nourished every single day of our lives.

And this is one detail I want particularly to emphasize. Make-up will wear better on a clean and healthy skin. That is why beauty authorities tell you repeatedly: cleanse your skin before retiring. Cleanse again in the morning. Remove all make-up before applying a fresh dusting of powder or dab of rouge. If every woman stopped to give herself a quick facial before applying make-up, it would not be necessary to renew powder and rouge so many times—make-up wears better, and looks better on a clean, cared-for skin.

FINISHING CREAM

DRY skin needs a finishing cream—one that has a little oil in it to keep the skin lubricated and ward off any drying effect of powder, rouge or even exposure to the elements. But that does not mean a very greasy cream—encouraging shine and an unwholesome, oily appearance. In applying your finishing cream, remember that a little is enough. Use it sparingly and blend it carefully over face and neck, with the same movements you used for applying the cleansing and nourishing creams—upward and outward. Remember? Now with a cleansing tissue blot to remove any excess. Be especially careful to remove excess from around the eyes and nose.

If your skin is oily there is no need to burden it with a cream. There are delightful finishing lotions on the market. They give a velvety quality to the skin—soft, transparent, fresh-looking. And these lotions usually keep powder and rouge doubly clingy, warding off shine (women complaining of "shining nose" please note).

Seasonal changes come in for their share of consideration when foundation preparations are up for discussion. For in the summer, there is less complaint in general about "dryness." In the winter, on the other hand, even the normal skin tends to be somewhat dry. That is why the lotions are more popular during the summer and the creams during the winter.

Yet, even during the winter months—or should I say especially during the winter months?—the lotions are more popular for evening wear. Also if a more lasting make-up is desired. If you should be making a train trip, visiting a friend, or preparing for a busy round of social engagements the lotion is preferable. Master the art of applying it skillfully. Moisten a pad of absorbent cotton in cold water. Now pour a little of the lotion on the cotton. Shake the bottle thoroughly if directions say so. Work quickly. Pat face and neck and before the lotion has a chance to dry, smooth and blend very evenly with the fingers. If you let the lotion dry in patches before smoothing and blending—well, you won't have that nice finish I've talked about.

The young, fresh, fine and firm, perfectly normal skin needs no foundation cream or lotion. Skin tonic can serve that purpose. With standards of personal loveliness going higher and higher our modern woman must look as perfectly groomed on an ordinary day as her forbears did on the very special occasions. And on the special occasions our modern woman surpasses even her own ideals of beauty.

Noble Turkey's Side-Partner

Cranberry, by Universal Consent, Conceded to Be Worthy a High Place Among the Holiday Delicacies; Fruit Is Grown in Many States.

September is cranberry-picking time in the bogs of Massachusetts, New Jersey and other cranberry-raising states. The piquant "side partner" of roast turkey and other holiday delicacies becomes an important source of income at that time of the year for scores of cranberry producers, and thousands of pickers.

"The cranberry thrives in 'depressions,' that is, geographical depressions," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society. "The type of soil best suited for cranberry culture is found only in low peat bogs which can be easily flooded to protect the plants from frost, insects, forest fires and weeds."

"Although the cranberry is raised on a small scale in Nova Scotia, Holland, Australia, and Tasmania, the cultivated cranberry is largely an American institution, developed from native plants, and associated since pioneer days with Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's feasts."

"Massachusetts is the leading cranberry-producing state, growing more than half of the world's crop. New Jersey ranks second, Wisconsin third, while New York, Oregon, Washington, Minnesota, Michigan, and Virginia also contribute to the tide of ruby berries valued at nearly $4,000,000 annually."

"Cranberries have been cultivated on Cape Cod since about 1810, but it was not until the accidental discovery in 1850 that 'sanding' (covering the bogs with a thin layer of clean sand) improved the quality and quantity of the crop, that the industry really prospered.

"The word 'bog' may suggest a swampy area, but during most of the growing season a cranberry bog is as dry as a well-kept lawn. Water, however, must be available for flooding and sometimes for irrigation. A cranberry bog must possess both dikes to hold water as long as it is needed, and ditches to drain off excess moisture; for, while the cranberry plant can live for months under water during the dormant season, it cannot grow or produce fruit while submerged. If the bogs are flooded during the bearing season, they must be drained rapidly, because prolonged flooding is often followed by serious injury to the fruit and even to the plants.

"Given an acid soil, valueless for most other agriculture, the cranberry thrives. Decayed vegetable matter forms an ideal base, while sand, spread loosely over the field, permits better drainage and also keeps down weeds and moss. The average size of Massachusetts and New Jersey bogs is about ten acres, but any patch of level bog land from one-tenth of an acre up to 100 acres or more can be successfully cultivated. Large bogs must be subdivided, however, for flooding and drainage.

"Massachusetts bogs show a better average yield than those of any other state, producing about 30 barrels per acre. Some bogs have averaged 50 barrels per acre over a period of years. Yields of 100 barrels per acre, or even a barrel to the rod, are not unknown. But the all-time championship for large acreage is held by an 80-acre bog in Wisconsin, which has produced more than 125 barrels to the acre, and even in 'off years' yields over 50.

"The cranberry plant itself is a tiny, trailing, woody growth, rising less than a foot above the ground, but forming a dense mat of vegetation. Once the fruit was picked entirely by hand. Now hand scoops, like an enlarged sugar scoop with teeth, strip the berries from the bushes.

"The harvesting season is short, beginning in New England in early September (a week or two later in New Jersey) and extending over a period of only six weeks. For this reason the bogs must be situated near a source of surplus labor. In Massachusetts many of the cranberry pickers come from the industrial districts around Boston; New Jersey pickers migrate from Philadelphia, Newark, and Trenton; and Indians from reservations pick part of Wisconsin's crop. Where heavy hand scoops are used men do most of the work in the field. Women are employed in the screening and packing houses.

"Central screening houses and co-operative marketing agencies are used by many cranberry producers. In the screening houses an ingenious machine separates good from bad berries by forcing them over a short barrier. Soft ones fall into a discard hopper. Hand sorters 'screen' all berries before they are packed into quarter-barrel boxes for shipment.

"Although the cranberry made its dinner table debut as cranberry sauce, it now appears in a number of different guises, ranging from cranberry juice cocktail to 'mock cherry pie' (made of cranberries and raisins). Cranberry muffins, steamed cranberry puddings, cranberry salad, and cranberry frappe are other culinary uses of the fruit. By canning a part of each autumn's crop, cranberry raisers have extended the cranberry-eating season throughout the year."

HEROES REST IN MARSHY SOIL OF OLD LOUISIANA?

A persistent legend which has become part of Louisiana folklore is legend at all to the natives who live along Barataria bayou. In this picturesque marshy country, about twenty miles south of New Orleans, the natives are convinced that Napoleon does not sleep in Les Invalides and that John Paul Jones' great crypt at Annapolis honors an unknown sailor. They will reverently show the visitor three grass-covered graves, which, they announce with conviction, cover the ashes of the Little Corporal, of John Paul Jones, and of the pirate Lafitte.

It is, of course, historical fact that an expedition was organized to rescue Napoleon from St. Helena, but before the expedition under Dominique You sailed from New Orleans, Napoleon died. The Baratarians say different, however. They declare that all the activity of You's expedition was just huggemugger to conceal the fact that, while the show went on, Jean Lafitte was actually on his way to St. Helena. On the Isle he substituted a man closely resembling Napoleon, and smuggled the ex-emperor off St. Helena. But when the sloop was almost within sight of Louisiana on the return trip, Napoleon died, and Lafitte buried him at Barataria.

As to Jones—they insist that the great admiral joined Lafitte's forces after his sea victories, instead of going to Yucatan as history tells us, that he died at sea on an expedition and was buried beside Napoleon. The body buried at Annapolis is just some other fellow, identified only by a navy uniform coat. Skeptical visitors may smile, but the Baratarians—some of whom claim to be direct descendants of Lafitte—cross themselves devoutly before the graves and heap them high with flowers every All-Soul's day.

Says Music Makes for Happiness in Wedlock

Study music before you marry and keep at it afterwards and your marital life will be a happy one. Such is the advice of Mana-Zucca, American woman composer and pianist, who made her debut with the New York Philharmonic orchestra when she was eight years old.

All of her home and family accomplishments she feels can be attributed to the mental stimulation and balance that music has given her.

"Time and again," Mana-Zucca commented, "friends have told me that since their marriage they have given up music. This is tragic, I think. To my mind the musical wife is the ideal mate for any man."

"There is something in music which gives one a happier, more soothing and enduring outlook on life. It is often just that certain something necessary to prevent a breaking-up of family ties."—New York World-Telegram.

So to Speak

"They took their honeymoon in the stratosphere."

"Back to earth now, I presume?"

STOP ITCHING

It's amazing how this tormenting trouble—wherever it occurs—yields to soothing

Resinol

EXPLANATION

For several minutes the young man did not speak. His heart was too full. It was enough for him to know that this glorious creature loved him; that she had promised to be his wife.

With a new and delightful sense of ownership he feasted his eyes upon her beauty, and realized that henceforth it would be his privilege to provide for her welfare and happiness.

His good fortune seemed incredible. Finally he whispered, tenderly: "How did it happen, darling, that such a bright, shining angel as yourself fell in love with a dull, stupid fellow like me?"

"Goodness knows," the girl murmured, absently. "I must have a screw loose somewhere."

Next Best Thing

Daughter—No, Jack is not rich; in fact he can hardly raise the money to keep going.

Mercenary Mother—Then I'd tell him to keep coming.

Willing to Risk It

Country Gentleman—Here, hold my horse for a minute, will you?

Senator—Sir, I'm a member of congress!

Country Gentleman—Never mind. You look honest.

And Others

He—There's no fool like an old fool.

She—Oh, I don't know. There's the young fool who marries an old fool.

Curious Laws Once in Force on Isle of Man

At the present time the deemsters are the judges on the Isle of Man, and there are two now existing. In former times they pronounced doom or judgment, and were named deemsters from the Norse Dómi. They were formerly elected by the people, and received no salary, but were entitled to a fee from each landowner, to be paid to their collectors, who were known as bonacks.

The deemster's warrant or summons was simply a stone on which his initials were written and handed to the officer of the court. In this more enlightened age the two deemsters of the island—who are appointed by the lieutenant governor—receive a salary of £1,200 (about $6,000) a year each.

Amongst the old laws were some that were exceedingly curious. One of the most ancient laws arose from the miserable dwellings of the common people. They were without doors or windows, and a person who entered a house without first speaking and saluting the occupier was regarded as a felon.

At one time sheep stealing in the Isle of Man was a capital offense. Not only so, but ordinary thefts were punishable by death, and this was the law until the middle of the last century. A felon's goods were forfeited to the lord of the island, but by a quaint custom the lord's wife was entitled to all the felon's goats—if he had any.

MAKES YOU LOSE UNHEALTHY FAT

Make No Mistake—Fat Is Dangerous—Ask Your Doctor

To take off fat—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—one bottle lasts 4 weeks—get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the SAFE and HARMLESS way to lose fat—your money returned.

Reduces From 154 to 128

"Less than 4 weeks ago I started taking Kruschen. I weighed 154 and felt tired all the while. Now I weigh 128. I feel so full of energy I can't seem to work fast enough." Mrs. R. H. Hamilton, Carbondale, Pa.

While losing fat with Kruschen you gain in physical attractiveness—you look and feel younger—no more gas, acidity—no more constipation.

RESOURCEFUL

The bachelor was paying his recently married friend a visit.

"Well," said the latter, after they had inspected the flat, "what do you think of it?"

"Pretty good," praised the bachelor; "but there's one thing that has struck me as rather strange. Why did you choose a flat with such a tiny kitchen?"

The married man winked artfully. "You're the first man I've told this to, so keep it quiet," he whispered. "It's so small that I can't get in there to help my wife when she's doing the washing-up."

His Foot in It

Mrs. Ayres (gushingly)—Do you know, Mr. Bootle, I'm often mistaken for my daughter.

Mr. Bootle (gallantly)—By Jove! Fancy you having a daughter as old-looking as you are.

A Mistake

He—I say, I wish you wouldn't call me Mr. Jenkins.

She (coolly)—Why don't you wish me to call you Mr. Jenkins?

He—Merely because my name's Robinson.—Pearson's.

GETTING IT STRAIGHT

Wife—If you earned as much money as the Browns, we might have an auto.

Hubby—You mean, if I got as much money as Brown. I earn more.

He's Used to It

You can tell a bachelor from a married man. A married man doesn't look astonished when his shin is kicked under a table.—Los Angeles Times.

Playing Safe

Aunt—So you call your canary Joe. Does that stand for Josephine?

Niece—We don't know. That's why we call it Joe!

MORE SATISFACTION CAN'T BE BOUGHT FOR 5¢

In Spite of It

"So you want to marry my daughter? Have you considered her family in this matter?"

"I have, sir. I love that girl so much, I'd be willing to put up with anything."

Here's an Idea

Father—Your new beau doesn't remain very late. The last one used to hang around until the milkman called.

Daughter—You see, dad, this one is the milkman.—Grit.

A Quicker Way To Ease Headaches

A Discovery that's Bringing Fast Relief to Millions

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia... the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered.

Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which a Bayer Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. A Bayer Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus is ready to go to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, see that you get the Genuine BAYER Aspirin. For Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always say "BAYER Aspirin."

useful articles to Mrs. Hirsch for use on her trip.

In addition the guests came laden with good things to eat. A very sum-her a happy sojourn in Florida.

on, all were in a happy mood.

We hope to see them all again on next Tuesday when the sale, bunco, horse is five years old, has a white of the barn sometime between sundown and dawn Thursday morn-

"A Century of Enjoyment" was the title of the unique social sponsored by the Chorus Choir of the Green Garden Methodist church of which Rev. C. F. Schellhase is the pastor. The social was held last Friday evening in the social room of the church.

A penny for every letter in the name of the person attending, was collected that evening.

Fully 200 people attended, the church parlors being filled to its capacity.

Musical selections, vocal numbers, readings, playlets, demonstrations interspersed with instrumental music, was the diversion of the evening.

A most enjoyable time was spent after which refreshments were served.

His Accidental End

There are all sorts of ways of putting things, and some sound much better than others. For example, there is the case of the man of whom Lord Coleridge used to tell, whose father was hanged for highway robbery.
Some one asked him how his father died. "Sir," said he "he fell from a scaffold outside Newgate while he was talking to a clergyman."—Youth's

The telephone can be your friend or your enemy—depending upon the you—who have never even seen you. Be pleasant, accommodating, respectful in these same conversations and you'll be doing yourself a favor and creating an atmosphere of temperance and refinement in your home.

Don't answer "Hello" sharply, then bite off a brief, impatient "No, he's not here," and slam the receiver. Take it easy. A soft, pleasant "Hello" and a brief, accommodating explanation: "I'm sorry, he's gone to the movies. Would you like to leave your name or a message?"

Remember, just because the caller can't see you or can't be seen is no reason to be discourteous. How do you feel when you call a friend whose sister or brother or servant barks a surly, impatient reply, then hangs up as though a door were being slammed in your face?

A caller, you know, gets an immediate impression of your home from the way the telephone is answered. Why not try to make it a good one?

Hey diddle, diddle, the cat and the fiddle,
The cow jumped over the moon,
But she gives us the best kind of food,
So who cares if she flies like a loon.

Great Writer's Idea

Solomon's proverbs, I think, have suggested to say that as the sore palate andeth grit, so an uneasy conscience hatheth innumerable—George Eliot.
